Combining Flower Essences, Healing Music, and Inner Healing for Your Body, Soul, and Spirit.

If we want the best for our health, it would seem natural that we'd look to incorporate a variety of techniques that work well together. By combining complementary forms of energy healing, the overall effectiveness could bring our bodies into a greater place of health. Too often, we pick and choose here and there but don't necessarily find methods that have been paired together to give a "triple whammy" effect.

Following our introduction, a comprehensive chart of emotional roots with physical symptoms is paired with three things: flower essences, music, and books to help you work through issues. What you'll see in the chart is years of experience and research in regards to the energy healing techniques we use and are known to work.

Scientific studies are starting to show that physical symptoms are indeed connected to emotional issues. So, when dealing with emotional trauma, your body can then be brought back to a healthy place. As a trio, what we bring to you is a carefully worked out list of emotional roots and physical symptoms paired with our products that we believe will give you the emotional support needed as your physical body starts to heal.

Seneca and Alice have worked with emotional and energy healing for several years. Del is a college professor and musician who's written music specifically for the purposes of healing the body, soul, and spirit. We each bring a variety of experiences to the table but we have one overall goal; our intent is that you can be healed – body, soul, and spirit.

Alice, Del, and Seneca ☺

How to Use This Chart

You'll notice in the left column a list of physical conditions. Next to it are some possible emotional ties. While your assumption may be that we've made recommendations to heal all your physical issues, that's not the case. We have correlated negative emotions as underlying roots to physical conditions, and from there, made suggestions as to how to heal the emotions. When you heal the heart wounds, the stress on the physical body lessens and your body can right itself, which may also entail using the proper medications, nutritional therapies etc.

Not everything listed will be true for every person with that physical issue. People are more complex than that, and it's never just one thing. Think of those suggestions as possibilities and stepping off points. They are areas for you to explore, and the recommended essences, music and sessions are based on those specific emotional conditions. If the emotional roots we've listed don't make sense in the context of your life, then the recommendations we've made probably won't help either. It's also not necessary to use every suggestion, but only the ones that resonate as the root of your issue.

How Flower Essences Can Heal Physical Conditions

If you are not familiar with flower essences yet, they are not oils, but a means of healing using frequencies to heal negative emotional states. They have no biochemical actions, so they do not directly affect the body, but because our emotions are so closely tied to our physical health, they can have an impact in ways that you may not have considered before. And, because they work on an energetic level only, they are totally safe and there is no problem using them in combination with other medications you may be taking.

I have listed mostly Bouquet Blends for a quick and easy grab for you, but I would be remiss if I didn't say that in many cases, a Custom Combo will be the best thing. Bouquet Blends are meant to help the widest amount of people possible, and you may be better off with some flowers targeting your issues more specifically, especially if you feel you need 2 or more blends. Catch up with me on my website, www.freedom-flowers.com and we'll talk about what you need.

I believe that for pervasive or chronic illnesses, we need to be addressing things on a spirit/soul/body level, so I really like to see flower essences used in tandem with other healing methods.

Think about cancer for a moment. We all probably know someone who went under the knife or went through chemo and came out with a "we got it all" diagnosis, only to have it return. Now maybe some of those cases are doctors who weren't diligent, but I doubt that is the norm. My sense is that the underlying emotional issues were never dealt with.

In the gardening world, we all know the difference between breaking a weed off at soil level versus pulling it out by the roots. If you break it off, everything looks good on the surface for a while, but eventually the weed comes back. That is what it is to ignore the other parts of our triune being, or to focus entirely on the physical while ignoring our soul (mind, will and emotions) and our spirit (our connection to higher realms.)

I hope you'll take advantage of this particular means of healing. I have a free mini-course in how to put flower essences to use to best effect for you at www.freedom-flowers.com/start-here

Del Hungerford – Healing Frequencies Music

For years, I've been fascinated with how music can be used for healing purposes. I always wondered what it was about music that affected people's emotions. For example, when people are sad, they listen to a certain type of music but probably not the same music they'd listen to when in a good mood. For most musicians, music is a form of expression. I add onto that because I also feel that I'm expressing what Creator is saying through me.

My desire is to explore the healing properties of music. I sit down at a keyboard and let music flow through me that's not printed on a page of music. Because I'd already been doing this during prayer sessions, it wasn't too much of a stretch to bring that into my own music. The "prophetic" title of my first five CD's is a result of letting what I was sensing flow through me musically. Each "song" features a spontaneous instrumental piece based on a specific musical pitch. The main frequency in my songs is subtle and consistent throughout the length of the song. This replaces the need for a tone generator, which can often be very boring (or annoying) to listen to. All songs are long-play for the purpose of being therapeutic.

Based on research, I decided to record my music at the A=432 concert pitch. Why that concert pitch? I believe there's enough evidence to show this concert pitch is closer to the natural frequencies within the earth itself than other concert pitches being used today. In looking at musical tuning before we had devices to measure frequencies, the natural concert pitch hovered around A=432 anyway. So, in a sense, I'm returning back to a more natural tuning. Tuning at A=432 seems to work especially well with emotional healing. That then allows the physical body to heal more effectively.

I'm committed to creating music that enhances cognitive function, heals the emotions, awakens intuition, and engages our senses. I am excited to bring you music that touches the whole person: body, mind, and spirit. My hope is that you will find peace, internal harmony, and revitalization in these healing frequencies.

I've been a classical musician since childhood. It was my dream to be play professionally once I realized that by practicing, I could actually be good. My dream led me to becoming a professional clarinetist and music educator in the Northwest. I've taught elementary music, middle school band, was the music director for a community theatre, was a staff accompanist in the public schools, and, currently, teach at the university level. I have three degrees in music from The University of Idaho (B.M), Yale University (M.M), and The University of Washington (D.M.A.). Although I make my living as a music teacher and educator, I'm learning to develop the "song" I hear coming from within me in a manner that I didn't know was possible for this stuffy, fuddy-duddy classical musician.

EMDR Music

I have over four hours of music in the EMDR (bilateral or panning) format. Many of those, you'll see on the list below. If you're in EMDR or Splankna therapy, many of these selections will work well for you.

EMDR is the acronym for "Eye Movement Desensitization and Reprocessing." It's a method of trauma therapy used by health care professionals that mimics REM (rapid eye movement) sleep patterns. The purpose of this type of therapy is for the client to work through particularly difficult traumas such as PTSD (post-traumatic stress disorder) or other particularly difficult events. It's only been in the last 20 years that EMDR therapy has come to the forefront. Because it's been so successful, many mental health professionals are beginning to utilize the EMDR techniques, which often involve the use of "bilateral music" where it pans gently from left to right.

Bilateral and EMDR music is meant to be listened to through headsets or ear buds. Most EMDR music fully pans from left to right. Some composers have taken their music and added a single percussion instrument or sound that pans left to right while the music plays in both speakers. Be sure to discuss with your health care practitioner which method of panning is best for you.

Holly Cumming is a licensed therapist who uses EMDR music. Her husband has also turned some of his music into the bilateral format. On Holly's site, she gives instructions on how to best use EMDR music:

Instructions for relaxing with Bilateral Music:

In order to combat stress and anxiety it's important to learn to breathe! Slow, deep, quiet breathing (diaphragmatic breathing) so that you SEE and FEEL your abdomen rise and fall with each in and out of your breath is key. Focus on breathing and enjoy the bilateral music. You can also enhance this experience by imagining a beautiful, safe place and being there in your mind. Make it as detailed as possible to help your mind buy into the idea that it's real.

Instructions for working with physical pain:

Again, as with relaxation work, you need to focus on belly breathing AND also focus on the pain (which is usually what we try to avoid). Just notice the pain -- even it is in several areas. Keep noticing the pain and when it moves or shifts just follow it and keep noticing. It is not unusual for the pain to move, shift, or change intensity. Whatever it does, simply notice it without judgement or a lot of thought as to what it means.

Alice Briggs – Inner Healing practitioner and artist

I became interested in inner healing primarily because my sister was healed of severe fibromyalgia after three sessions of Splankna. She had received many other treatments and a lot of prayer, but Splankna was the tipping point that brought the full healing. She has had no recurrence of symptoms after 8 plus years! I began my training in Splankna and have developed a great interest in the various ways and means that Creator uses to bring healing and freedom from all types of oppression and issues. I love being a tool in His hand and watching Him meet you at your deepest needs and bringing healing and wholeness.

Everyone experiences troubles, hard times, disappointments, failures, and setbacks. What you do with those issues ultimately will determine how emotionally and spiritually healthy you are in the future. When we experience trauma of all sorts, we tend to store those negative emotions in our physical being. We believe lies about ourselves and those around us. These emotions and lies tend to “trigger” us and we react in ways that are not logical or desirable. Sometimes these same issues can hinder us from moving forward as we are subconsciously sabotaging our own progress towards the things we most desire.

Most of the time, we are able to work through these types of issues on our own. But, sometimes, things get “stuck” and we need a little help to break through into our next level of freedom and peace. Working together, we will be able to quickly release emotional and spiritual baggage that may be hindering your progress.

Grounded in Christian principles, I work as a facilitator to not only guide you to release painful emotions, lies, and heartache that are triggering unwanted symptoms, but to rediscover who God is and what He has to say to and about you. Trained in both Splankna and Sozo techniques for inner and energy healing, I believe the Holy Spirit is our healer and will guide you on a journey towards complete emotional and spiritual healing.

There are many different names for the process of healing the emotional and spiritual wounds that we all encounter during life. Inner Healing is a broad term that encompasses an area that has not been addressed by more traditional methods. We are learning more and more about the inner-connectedness of our beings: mind, body, emotions, spirit, and soul. But what is becoming clear, is that many times physical complaints are the result of emotional and spiritual issues. While I cannot guarantee physical relief, many people have found that as they become healed of their emotional and spiritual wounds, that physical improvement of symptoms follows.

Although there are many anecdotal reports of great benefit, and all of these modalities appear to show great promise of benefit to people emotionally, spiritually, and even physically; they have thus far not been fully researched by the western medical, academic, and psychological communities. Therefore, they are considered experimental and the extent of their benefits (which appear to be many) and their risks (which appear to be minimal) are not fully known.

Unlike what traditional, western medicine has become, these modalities and treatment protocols are highly individualized. No two sessions are exactly the same even with the same client with the same issue. Are there similarities? Yes, of course. We all share the same human condition. But there are many variables that come into play. I think that this is one of the parts that fascinates me the most! It is such a clear and distinct demonstration that God created each of us uniquely, and that He knows each of us very well ...much better than we know ourselves.
